BY SUBMARINE SHOT

Turkish Submersible Craft Fires Gun to Halt Passenger Ship Barulos.

OVERWHELMED BY FRIGHT MANY JUMP INTO THE SEA

Mrs. Eleanor Franklin Egan Describes Efforts of Enemy Crew to Save Lives.

NEW YORK, November 29.—A Turkish submarine stopped the British passenger ship Barulos in the Mediterranean and after twenty-five persons had been drowned assisted in rescuing many of the 250 passengers who had gone overboard in a panic, according to Eleanor Franklin Egan, an eyewitness, who has arrived on the steamship New York.

The Barulos, according to Mrs. Egan, who is a writer returning from a sixmonth trip through southern Europe.

Invitation of the submarine commander.

Mrs. Egan 'said she witnessed many heartrending scenes.

"One woman," she added, "who had lost her three children by throwing them overboard went stark mad. In the steerage was a troop of Japanese acrobats. One of them, a woman with an infant child, was seen almost exhausted trying to cling to the sides of the ship. She was surrounded by many others. A rope was thrown into her hands, but, looking up, she exclaimed in English:

"Don't mind me. I belong to no one and have no one to care for me. Help some one else."

"With these words she passed the rope to another woman, and, with her babe in her arms, sank from sight.

"The rescued British sailors proved herees. They not only tried to quell the panic, but succeeded in rescuing many persons. Afterward they helped the wounded.

Remains Alongside Five Hours.

month trip through southern Europe, left Pieraeus for Alexandria October 2 Although the ship flew the British flag, her crew was Greek, the passengers, a majority third class, being chiefly five hours, or until all possible rescues Greeks and orientals. When about five had been made, and the wounded had hours south of Crete the ship picked up been attended. She then disappeared

"Led by the crew and the fireroon force, the passengers rushed for the boats. Women, unable to get to the boats, threw their children into the sea and jumped after them. Frightened boats, threw their children into the sea and jumped after them. Frightened sailors cut the ropes holding the small boats, and when the latter crashed into the water three of the six were swamped and emptied of their human loads. "I was at the rail when the submarine appeared, and I started back toward the stairs leading below, with the idea of helping to quell the panic. I was caught in the rush and literally forced over the side into the sea. I forced over the side into the sea. I It is a well known fact that infantry, once loosed on a charge upon trenches water, my difficulties being aggravated by the struggles of others trying to catch hold of me.

Enemy Crew Aids Rescue.

"It seemed that I had no sooner struck the water than the submarine marine crew were pulling people out of the water onto her deck.
The officer was holding up his hands, shouting to the people in the water to be calm. I heard him say in perfect English:
"For God's sake, go back to your ship, we are not murderers."
"By this time I had worked my way some distance from the ship, and seeing one of the lifeboats near I held up my hand and called for help. The peo-ple in the boat responded and, after a second attempt, succeeded in throwing a line to me when I was all but exhausted.

"The first of the panic over, we rowed back to the Barulos and were taken aboard. Women and children, many in a half-drowned state, were crowding the deck of the submarine, which remained alongside. When all the rescued were returned to the Barulos, a toll showed that twenty-five were missing, fourteen children, seven women and four men. Two of the latter were British sailors from the Sailor Prince, who lost their lives diving overboard with their mates rescuing children.

Many Injured in Panic.

"In addition to the twenty-five drowned many were wounded in the panic. Several of the most serious were taken into the submarine and treated by our ship doctor, who went aboard at the nvitation of the submarine comman

Remains Alongside Five Hours.

"Only one shot was fired by the submarine. She remained alongside for hours south of Crete the ship picked up three boats containing the crew of the British steamship Sailor Prince, which had been sunk by a submarine a few hours previously.

Submarine Appears.

The Barulos, Mrs. Egan said, carried only four lifeboats, each with a capacity for thirty people. The picking up of the crew of the Sailor Prince created a feeling of excitement which was at fever heat when suddenly a submarine came to the surface about two miles distant and fired a shot over the Barulos, evidently as a signal for her to stop.

"Instantly a wild panic broke loose." said Mrs. Egan. "The four lifeboats of the Barulos were resting in their chocks, while swung alongside were the two boats in which the men from the Sailor Prince had made their escape.

"Led by the crew and the fireroom in the sail spirit said was contained and the wounded had been attended. She then disappeared under the water and we proceeded to Alexandria without further incident. "I did not learn the submarine's name or designating number, but she was one of the largest boats of her kind I have ever seen. The captain of the Sailor Prince told me that he recognized her as the same one that had sunk his ship some hours previous, although at that time, he said, she flew the Austrian colors. Her deck armament consisted of two 12-pounders, which were in plain sight as she came alongside the Barulos. The Sailor Prince, her captain said, was given twenty minutes to get her crew into the boats before she was sunk by nine shots fired into the ham Barulos. This may be due to frequent changing of names and renaming of ships captured in the war zone.
